“Helping to enable and empower Maori in business”

“The challenging waters of opportunity.”

When the ancestors of the Te Arawa people arrived here, they adapted to a new and unknown environment. They developed a new palate to capitalise on the natural resources in the region. The lakes became their main thoroughfare, as the trees were gracefully sculpted into vessels that took them from village to village and eventually lake to lake. Today our natural environment continues to offer opportunities for the entrepreneur, the committed and the creative.
